Subject: RE: Jenna's performance in CP Eng. III

Mr. Pelletier,

Thank you very much for the heads-up. I am well aware that Jenna is not performing to her abilities in English as I have been speaking with her about this all school year. She has acknowledged to me that she is not performing at her personal best and attributes that to her choosing to not complete assignments. Jenna has been candid with me about her performance at school but chooses to not make the necessary changes. She is also aware that her substandard efforts may very well cause her to fail English for the year (which I believe is inevitable at this point). Unfortunately, there is nothing I can say or do to compel Jenna to practice more self-discipline except to allow natural consequences to occur. I am saddened by my daughter's choices as she is an exceptionally intelligent young woman.

I will continue to speak with my daughter about this issue and hopefully she will decide to make some positive changes before the end of the school year.

Thank you very much for your concern and for communicating with me about this.

Subject: Jenna's performance in CP Eng. III

Dear Ms. Turcotte,

I regret to inform you that Jenna is just not performing well as a student in College English III. We all know that Jenna is a very capable young woman who should be passing this class with flying colors. However, she fails to complete and submit homework. In particular, she has not submitted any material related to the critical analysis literary research project. It is mandatory that all junior complete the literary research project in order to move on to 4th year English.

Without a significant change in Jenna's work habits in this class, I am afraid that she will have to consider the possibility of summer school and/or repeating CP English III in her senior year.

Sorry about this news, but I feel that you should be made aware of this situation.

Sincerely,

Philip Pelletier, room 110
