Rose,

I have given your invitation for an interview significant consideration and have discovered that my employer would be an insurance company, whose primary objective is to make money... this money is made from providing services to elderly, or retired, people who have minimal income and cannot afford to purchase something they don't necessarily need, such as some of the policies offered by all insurance companies... as you said, you are in the business to make money... I, however, am in the human being business... which does not include making money from them...

Therefore, because this agency's primary objective is to create revenue, and not to help the individual, I will be declining your offer for an interview as my objectives are in direct opposition to yours.

Thank you for your interest and attention.
