I like men who do not hold steadfast to “what they like” and what they don’t like but rather who are willing to evolve and grow as a result of new, different and sometimes uncomfortable situations... I limit myself to those wo/men who pay as much attention to their emotional and spiritual health as they do to their physical and financial health... I am not interested in people who are concrete thinkers and not willing to see “what could be” in addition to “what is”... I am a rational idealist with many different flavors about my personality and will not settle for less than what I am seeking... which, in this case, would be someone who can match my wits, spiritual depth and desire to evolve...

I really not on the computer all time but really would like to talk to you further

Its not a matter of my being able to receive long distance phone calls... it's a matter of a poor signal so my phone conversations are rare, short, sweet and to the point... I do not spend any length of time on the phone beyond necessary calls...

Well if we hit it off can you receive long distance phone calls?

Gina <goddessunleashed@roadrunner.com> wrote:

That's unfortunate because where I live does not afford me a satisfactory phone signal so my primary means of communicating from home is via the computer and instant messenger programs... so, how is this gonna work??
