

From: Gina Turcotte <goddessgina@verizon.net>
To: 'wecare12@gwi.net'
Date: 1/24/2006 3:41:42 PM
Subject: Course Writings for Gina Turcotte's interview
Attachments: Integrating Intrinsic Motivation and Self Determination Theory.doc
How Bipolar I Disorder Arrests the Psychological, Psychosocial and Identity Development of Adolescents Transitioning to Young Adulthood.doc
Enhancing Illness Management for Individuals with Bipolar Affective Disorder through the development and integration of spiritual beliefs.doc
Chemical Dependency Counseling Model.doc

2nd attempt

Attached to this email, in Microsoft Word format (*.doc), are 4 papers I have written in conjunction with my courses at the University. Please be mindful that although I do site some personal experiences within the context of these papers, I have worked diligently, and have been immensely successful with the trials and tribulations that I speak about throughout these papers. If you have any questions about the personal experiences I speak about, please do not hesitate to ask me about them.

On that note, attached are the following papers:

"Integrating Intrinsic Motivation and Self-Determination Theory", dated 9/26/03

"How Bipolar I Disorder Arrests the Psychological, Psychosocial, and Identity Development of Adolescents Transitioning to Young Adulthood", dated 5/1/04

"Enhancing Illness Management for Individuals with Bipolar Affective Disorder Through the Development and Integration of Spiritual Beliefs", dated 7/31/04

"Chemical Dependency Counseling Model", dated 9/10/05 (this is a very, very long paper [29 pgs] but is a very intriguing, thought-provoking glimpse into my personal and professional opinions of successful growth and personal evolvement of chemical dependency clients.)

As I am sure you are well aware, college papers are usually required to be of a substantial length, so your reading these papers in their entirety is unlikely and unexpected. However, I do believe if you have the time, you will find all of these papers very enlightening and intriguing indications of my personal and professional focus.

I look forward to our interview this Monday, January 23 at 9:00 a.m. and the possibility of our discussing the papers above.

Thank you for your interest.

Gina Turcotte