 Subject: Some more self-empowerment literature

I just found these additional links, regarding sexual harassment, that may be useful for select residents in our program as this seems to be a paramount issue du jour. Just wanted to pass them along FYI.

What's Up(R) With Sexual Harassment

Clearly identifies the distinction between flirting and sexual harassment through a series of games, quizzes, and problem-solving exercises. What constitutes sexual harassment, as well as its harmful effects and legal consequences, is stressed in an age-appropriate way. Children will discover how to promote positive social relationships, and why it's important to have a school environment that is free from gender bias.

Interactive features will help readers understand the feelings experienced by sexual harassment victims; respond to various forms of harassing behavior; participate in school efforts to encourage prosocial behavior; and help others have a positive, healthy school experience. 24 pages, 8 1/2" x 11". Ages 12-14

Reading audience: Ages 12-14

Let's Talk About Sexual Harassment In School; An Information & Activities Book

Fictitious characters Jason and Sally clearly illustrate the harmful effects of sexual harassment -- to the individual and to the school.

Letter-writing exercises, games, and puzzles show preteens how to stop sexual harassment, and encourage students to take a strong stand against this hurtful practice. 16 pages, 8 1/2" x 11". Ages 9-12
