

Maine | Federal Rental Assistance Facts

About 29 percent of all Maine households – or 161,200 households – are renters. Federal rental assistance programs enable more than 31,900 low-income households in Maine to rent modest housing at an affordable cost. About 72 percent of these households are headed by people who are elderly or have disabilities; approximately 23 percent are families with children that are headed by people younger than 62 and do not have disabilities. In Maine, 31 percent of HUD-assisted units, and a large share of USDA-assisted units, are located outside of metropolitan areas.

Federal rental assistance programs reach only a small share of the low-income Maine households that pay unaffordable rental housing costs.

- In Maine, 40,600 low-income renter households pay more than half their monthly cash income for housing costs. The median income of these households is $1,010 and the median housing costs are $860, leaving only $150 to pay for other necessities. About 47 percent of these severely cost-burdened renter households are headed by people who are elderly or have disabilities, while 22 percent are other families with children.
- When housing costs consume more than half of household income, low-income families are at greater risk of becoming homeless. Point-in-time surveys suggest that at least 2,400 people are homeless in Maine.
